DEFENDS HER GOOD NAME.

MISS TURNER DENIES THE TRUTH OF GILLIGAN'S MURDER CONFESSION.

She Says She Was Not Present When Gilligan Shot Her Father and Asserts That Her Relations With Gilligan Were Proper-Her Story of the Crime-Ordeal Ahead of Her. RICHMOND. Va.. June 9 .- For three hours to-day Miss Isabel Turner, the young and beautiful daughter of the late C. Beverly Turner, who was shot down near his own doorway in Isle of Wight county last December, sat in the witness chair denying the most serious charges that can be brought against womanhood and teiling in her utterances, often broken by tears, the story how her father was killed by Andrew Carter Gilligan, once her lover, who is now on trial for his life. Yesterday Sheriff Edwards, who captured

Gilligan, was put on the stand and related the story of the shooting as told him by Gilligan. It was the same old story of placing the blame on the woman, the prisoner declaring that the girl was in his arms when he shot her father, and that it was at her earnest solicitation that he was upon the place that night. He also accused Isabel of conduct with him in the past which had caused him to lose his respect, although not his affection, for her. To-day Miss Turner went on the stand and told the whole story of the tragedy. Her cheeks were often red with shame at the questions asked her by counsel, and often she broke down and wept bitterly. She has been present since the first day of the trial, attired in deepest black and wearing three veils to hide her features. To-day she thew back her veils and revealed a most comely face. Her golden hair within her black bonnet formed an aureole above her broad brow. Her eyes an aureole above her broad brow. Her eyes are blue and wistful.

There was silence as the girl began the vindication of her character.

Twas 20 years old the very day my father was killed, she said, "and I had just come home from school to spend the Christmas holidays. There were many entertainments being given at that time and I attended some of them. At one, the Monday before my father was shot down. I went to Bayview. Gilligan was there, but 1 did not speak to him. There was no sign of recognition, no notes, no messages, nothing.

sign of recognition, no notes, no messages, "On Wednesday afternoon I went down to Fergusson's wharf, which is near our house, to see some friends off. After going a few steps from the Oyster House I waved at the boat again. I walked away rapidly. Some persons were in front and some behind metales have been been been been as the stackened my speed. Later I heard footsteps. It was Mr. Gilligan, I did not turn my head at first. He accosted me with: Good evening, Miss Isabel' 'Good evening, Nick,' I replied. He hesitated and said: 'Come on, I have something for you.' I answered: 'I don't want it.'

I replied. He hesitated and said: Come on I have something for you. I answered: I don't want it.

"I walked more slowly. Mr. Howle and Capt. Marshall came up. Capt. Marshall assisted me. We walked off the wharf. Mr. Gilligan came out of the Post Office, slashed his horse and drove away at a rapid gait. The wharf is half a mile long. I made no request of Mr. Gilligan to come and see me. I did not say I would lump overboard if he did not come. I have stated every word spoken; I have told all, I am positive.

"Mr. Howle drove me till we met father and mother. We changed horses, and mother and I went to Smithfield. She was with me nearly the whole time there; she drove home with me. When I got home I heard some one at the gate. After we got out I said: 'Who is that?' Mother said: 'Who is that?' Still no reply. It was Mr. Gilligan. He put his hand on my shoulder. I drew back. Gilligan said: 'Why did you treat me so coolly on the wharf?'

"I went into the house. Mother had dropped the mail. I said I was going back to pick up the mail. I said I was going back to pick up the mail. Father said: 'Don't do it, Baby, it's too cold.' I went and he held the lantern. A man accosted me. It was Gilligan. He took hold of my cape and wanted to talk with me. I said I was cold and did not have time to talk. I went up the steps into the house. There was snow on the ground. I was very cold. I fixed my wraps and put on another dress. After a little while we heard a loud report. Mother said it was a big firecracker. I said it sounded like a gun.

"We thought no more about it then. I closed the blinds and doors. I saw Mr. Gilligan after that, he was near the stable. We locked the doors. Later we kindled a fire and cooked supper. Some one turned the blinds. We pi'ked up a pan and started to the milk house. Both mother and I saw an object in the garden. I said: 'Who is that at the garden gate?' No answer. Mother ried: 'Who is that? Have you no tongue to tell me?' The object vanished. We went in the house and locked the door. Mother said s He touched my arm. I have sale and when I aliye when he left me at the gate and when I went to pick up the mail.

"Then," continued the girl, her voice broken by sobs, "we found father stretched on the ground. A ragged hole was torn in his neck by a charge of shot. The snow near where he lav was stained with his blood. I was not with Gilligan when he killed my father," and she looked fiercely at the prisoner, who dropped his eyes and toyed nervously with an unlighted ckarette which he held in his hand.

"I regret to ask you the question," said Commonwealth's Attorney Boykin, "but my duty compels me to do so. Have you ever been improperly intimate with Gilligan, as he charges in his confession?"

A wave of crimson swept over the girl's face

in his confession?"

A wave of orimson swept over the girl's face and for several seconds no reply came. Then vehemently she exclaimed:

"Never, never! with him or any one else, at any time or any place!" time or any place!" Did you ever love Gilligan?" Mr. Boykin

"I once loved him," she replied; "but twelve onths before he killed my father my love months before he killed my father my love died."

Miss Turner's testimony was given in manner that impressed the Court, but a greater ordeal awaits her. Counsel for the prisoner have a number of love letters written by her to Gilligan not long, it is alleged, before the killing, in one she warns him not to come on a certain night to the window of her room, but to meet her elsewhere later, saying in explanation that her mother would that night sleep with her. These letters will be produced and read. As yet, with the exception of the one noted, their contents are unknown, but upon them the lawyers for the defence are counting to secure the acquittal of their client.

NOTES OF LEGAL EVENTS.

A suit has been brought against the United States, in the Circuit Court for the district comprising the State of Washington, by one T. F. Townsley, to recover damages for the "violation of a contract in regard to the transportation of reindeer for the Government from Siberia to Alaska. Townsley as the representative of a steamship company undertook to run a steamer "between St. Lawrence Bay (Siberia) and Reindeer Station (Alaska to carry 1,000 reindeer, more or less, at the rate of $7 each for said deer," Dr. Sheldon Jackson made the bargain in behalf of the United States. When the steamer arrived at the Siberian port whence she was to convey the reindeer across Behring Sea, a distance of about 100 miles, to Port Clarence in Alaska, the requisite number of animals could not be obtained. Only 161 reindeer in all were secured. Townsley claims to have been prepared to transport 1,000 and to be entitled to pay for carrying that number, notwithstanding that the words "more or less" were used in the contract. The Solicitor of the Treasury agrees with this construction and has written an opinion to the effect that the Government, upon the face of the agreement, was obliged to deliver 1.000 reindeer to Townsley for transportation. Townsley, however, has expressed a willingness to compromise his claim of $7,000 for $2,500, and the Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner of Education have recommended a settlement on these terms

A Coroner's jury in a suburb of London were extremely incensed recently at the conduct of a medical man in refusing to go to see a sick person to whom he was summoned in the night time. The wife of the patient sent to three different doctors. The first two refused positively to attend the case, while the third declared that he felt too seedy to come out at that time of night. There was testimony before the Coroner to the effect that if a physician had seen the husband at the time when these doctors were summoned his life might have been saved. They were severely censured by the foreman of the jury "for their inhuman conduct." This occurrence leads the Lancet to emphasize the proposition that a physician is under no legal obligation whatever to undertake the treatment of a case, unless he is officially in charge of patients at a hospital. It argues that there is no more reason why a doctor should go to see a person who is said to be dying of disease than there is for a butcher to give a man a chop because the applicant says he is dying of starvation. We cannot concur in the opinion that there is no question of humanity or inhumanity in the matter, but the Lancet is undoubtedly right in saying that a medical man may lawfully refuse to heed such a summons as that in the case to which

The question whether a liquor tax certificate is a chattel, under the existing Liquor Tax law of this State, so that it may be the subject of a chattel mortgage, has recently been passed upon by the Court of Appeals in a case which came up from the Third Judicial Department. The Appellate Divisions have differed in opinion as to the character of such certificates. In this department they have been regarded as chattels, while in Brooklyn and Albany the Appellate Divisions have denied that they possess the attributes of chattels, although conceding that they are personal property. The latter view has been adopted by the Court of Appeals. "The term chattel," says Judge Edward T. Bartlett, "refers to things that can be used, handled, transported, as horses, carriages, furniture, machinery, tools and the numberless objects to be seen about us in everyday life, the value of which is in the possession of the thing itself. If a thief should steal this certificate, it would be waste paper in his hands. If he should make off with a horse and escape detection he would realize its value. The liquor tax certificate is personal property, but it is not a chattel within the purview of the Chattel Mortgage act."

A recent decision by the Appellate Court of Indiana deals with the liability of a city for injuries inflicted by the defective condition of platform scales which the city authorities permitted to be maintained in a public street. The scales were apparently safe and the plainsprinkling the street. A defective sill, which was out of sight, gave way and the plaintiff was hurt. The city disputed his claim for compensation on the ground that his act in driving over the scales was voluntary, and that he assumed the risk, inasmuch as he might just as well have driven elsewhere. The court, however, held that he was not required to anticipate that the platform, which was to-all intents anti purposes a part of the street, would be maintained in an unsafe condition; and that he was not chargeable with contributory negligence in trusting to its appearance of safety. If there had been any obvious danger the case would have been different.

A proposal to raise the salaries of the Judges of the Police Court of the District of Columbia from $3,000 to $4,000 a year has led the Senate Committee on District affairs to collect statistics concerning the compensation of similar officials in various parts of the Union. In the Greater New York, the City Magistrates appointed originally under the act of 1895, receive $7,000 per annum; while those appointed since consolidation receive $6,000, except in the borough of Queens and the borough of Richmond where the pay is only $5,000. In Buffalo, Police Judges are paid $5,000 a year, in Boston $4,000, in Cincinnati $4,000, in Cleveland $4,000, in San Francisco $4,000, reduced to $3,600 in the case of Magistrates appointed since the beginning of the present year, and in Rochester $3,800 In Washington the work of the Police Judges is exceptionally laborious, as the law requires them to sit on all legal holidays except Sundays, making 313 court days in a year. The Police Court collects over $33,000 in fines an-It tried 17,893 cases in 1899, and Senator McMillan declares that the questions of law presented therein for decision are as difficult and demand as great legal knowledge as those arising in any other of the courts of the District of Columbia.

The Supreme Court of the United States has recently taken occasion to express its opinion in regard to the agency clause so frequently found in life insurance policies declaring that the person procuring the insurance shall be deemed the agent of the insured. In the case of the Knights of Pythias against Withers, decided a few weeks ago, Mr. Justice Brown speaks of this clause thus: "In some jurisdictions it is held to be practically void and of no effect; in others it is looked upon as a species of wild animal. lying in wait and ready to spring upon the unwary policy-holder; and in all it is eyed with suspicion and construed with great strictness. We think it should not be given effect when manifestly contrary to the facts of the case or opposed to the interests of justice. The object of the clause in most cases is to transfer the responsibility for his acts from the party to whom it properly belongs to one who generally has no knowledge of its existence. The New York courts formerly treated this agency clause with more consideration than they do now. The prevailing view in this State is well set forth in a passage which Mr. Justice Brown quotes from an opinion of Presiding Justice Learned, of the Albany General Term, where he says: "The policy might as well say that the President of the company shall be deemed the agent of the insured. Such a clause is no part of a contract. It is an attempt to reverse the law of agency and to declare that a party is not bound by his agent's acts." (See 17 Hun's Reports, page 96).

The Adams Express Company has successfully defended a suit in Boston to recover $3.000 as the value of two old Dutch paintings which the plaintiff delivered to the express company for transportation to this city. The pictures were lost and the express company insisted that its liability was limited by a clause in the receipt providing that it should not be charge of assault. Alfred said that Lizzie kicked him in the leg and broke it. The girl was locked up in the Gerry society rooms. FEDERATION MEETING OVER

CLUB WOMEN GO HOME WITH RACE QUESTION UNSETTLED.

Attempt to Return to Mrs. Rufin, the Negro Delegate, the Dues From Her Club-She Returns the Money - Mrs. Lowe's Views on the Mission of Negro Club Women. MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 9.- The last day of the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs was spent in trying to heal the many wounds that have been caused during the week, but the various issues remain unset tled. The day was again marked by the color question, and even as the officers were leaving the city new developments continued to come up. It became known to-day that the Federation officers had tried to dispose of the issue that was raised by Mrs. Joseph St. Pierre Ruffin of Boston, who was barred by returning to her the $7.50 which the New Era Club, colored, had paid for dues. The officers instructed the Treasurer to send the money to Mrs. Ruffin. An envelope was handed to her. On opening it she found that it contained the dues she had paid. Mrs. Ruffin consulted her attorney, William T. Green, and on his advice she returned the money. Mrs. Ruffin took the stand that the New Era Club is a member of the Federation even if she did not get her seat. She holds that the Federation could not take away membership by refunding dues The Board of Directors and the council met this morning, but the legal action that Attorney Green was to bring did not come up. Mrs. Ruffin returned to Boston to-night and just before going said she was yet undecided

Mrs. Ruffin returned to Boston to-night and just before going said she was yet undecided what she would do. She said that when she returned to Boston she would consider the matter with her club and some action would then be outlined. Mrs. Rebbecca Lowe. President of the federation, two months ago congratulated Mrs. Ruffin in a personal letter on coming into the federation, but to-day she gave out the following interview, showing how she has changed in her position.

"Mrs. Ruffin belongs among her own people and among them she would be a leader, and could do much good, but among us she can create nothing except trouble. In the South I have done considerable to assist in the etablishment of kindergartens for colored children and the colored women who have the matter directly in charge are all good friends of mine. I associate with them in a business way, but, of course they would not think of sitting beside me at a reception or of standing with me on the platform at a convention.

"They are a race by themselves and among themselves they can accomplish much, assisted by us and the federation, which is ever ready to do all in its power to help them. Mrs. Ruffin should go to them. She could become a leader among them. Among us she can never be more than what she is now, and if she is the cultured lady every one says she is, she should put her education and her talents to good use as a colored woman among colored women. It is the high caste negroes who bring about all the ill feeling."

Another story that was circulated to-day was that the Massachusetts delegation just before leaving gave the general officers to understand that if the next biennial decided to come to Boston, that the New Era Club would be put on the local biennial committees. At the meeting of the council this morning the duties of newly appointed federation se retaries were defined. The directors also held a short meeting of the council this morning the duties of newly appointed federation se retaries were defined. The directors also held a short me ing, but took no action in regard to the next convention.

Some of the women favoring re-organization while in the city retained Attorney Rubles Cole to look into the Articles of Federation and he says that the incorporation is illegal because its articles provide that it is formed for the "reformation of men and women," and not for the purpose to which it is now being used. It is said that the officers will petition Congress for a federal charter, but the officers to-day declined to discuss the subject.

BENHAM MURDER TRIAL.

Arthur C. Wade, Counsel for Benham, Outlines the Case for the Defence.

CANANDAIGUA. N. Y., June 9 .- When court opened to-day Arthur C. Wade, of counsel for Benham, who is on trial for the murder of his wife, Florence Tout Benham, opened the case for the defence. He first said that the Supreme Court had sent the case to Ontario county, believing that Benham could get a fair trial there. He declared that that desire had been realized up to the present. He said that Benham had been faithful to his marriage promises up to the time their child was born after which he associated with other women. He then proceeded openly to state what the defence would prove. Mr. Wade declared that the prosecution had ought in every little private quarrel of the Benhams and had flaunted it before the jury as a criminal act. He criticised the testimony of Dr. Morris Townsend. He pointed out the absurdities and fallacies of the doctor's testimony, and said it would be shown that it was he who spread the report about prussic acid, and he was the only one who would positively assert that prussic acid caused death. Mr. Wade said the defence would show that the doctors got Mrs. Benham into the habit of wade said the defence would show that the doctors got Mrs. Benham into the habit of taking morphine, and she became a confirmed user of it buying it in large quantities, once buying all that they had at the Jewell drug store. Benham's purchases were on prescription, and altogether the seventy-two powders he bought her aggregated twelve grains, of morphine, or one-sixth of a grain to each powder, the remainder being phenacetine. Her purchases were often surreptitious.

The collapse of Dec. 31 was shown to be due to the sudden taking away of morphine, the heart stimulant she had been used to, and that only in the administration of other heart stimulants was she revived. The attorney declared that the defence could easily dispose of the prussic acid which it is claimed was found in Mrs. Benham's body. He said they would show that it was used to cure an organic trouble. "The testimony which we shall introduce", he continued, "will show you that this was the only manner in which this girl ever took or used any prussic acid, so that it becomes, gentlemen, the imperative duty of the prosecution to establish beyond doubt in your minds that the defendant gave the prussic acid to his wife with the intent of taking her life, and that if he did not do that he is entitled to acquittal by this court."

In closing Mr. Wade referred in an affecting manner to the long, hard struggle of Benham's did not do that he is entitled to acquittal by this court."

In closing Mr. Wade referred in an affecting manner to the long, hard struggle of Benham's mother of the past three years, her untiring devotion to her son and her family and her struggles in Batavia against the efforts to trample on her and hers. The defendant and his family were affected to tears.

Mrs. Eliza Root of South Byron was the only witness examined to-day. She testified that she attended Mrs. Benham when Howard Curtis Benham, Jr., was born and that the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Benham were very leasant.

COPS HAVE A SWEARING MATCH. When Seelig Objected One of Them Pointed a Pistol at Him. Frederick J. Seelig, formerly a school trustee and now a member of the Tammany Hall organization of the Eighth Assembly district, went to the Eldridge street station early yesterday morning and reported to Capt. Herlihy that he had been grossly outraged by Policeman Henry Heinatz of Capt. Herlihy's command. Seelig, who is a wholesale milk dealer, lives at 13 Allen street. He employs a number of men and his shop is directly under his sleeping apartments. According to his statement to Capt. Herlihy, shortly after daybreak yesterday morning he was awakened by a noise in the street. He opened his bedroom window and heard a numopened his bedroom window and heard a number of policemen in angry controversy in which profane language was freely used. He was able to gather from the conversation that the policeman on post had dropped his club on the sidewalk and that Heinatz had run up in the belief that the policeman on post had rapped for assistance. Heinatz, according to Seelig, was berating the other policemen when a roundsman appeared and Heinatz is alleged to have threatened to punch the roundsman.

"This policeman," said Seelig, "continued to swear at the other policemen even after they had left him. His noise became so unbearable that I opened the window and called upon him to stop and go away.

"I will punch your face off, he said, 'if you come out in the street.' He then pulled a revolver and aimed it at me. My wife and children drangged me away from the window."

At the time Seelig made this statement he did not know the name of the policeman. When the policemen of the watch were lined up at rolicall, Seelig picked out Heinatz as the man who had pointed a revolver at him.

Seelig then left the station promising to return and make a complaint against Heinatz. Heinatz refused to make any statement except to deny that he was the guilty man.

Heinatz was once dismissed from the Department on a charge of assaulting a roundsman, but was reinstated by the Supreme Court. It was stated at Seelig's apartments yesterday that he was out of town. Capt, Herliby refused to discuss the mater and Heinatz went out on post last night as usual. ber of policemen in angry controversy in which

MAY BUY FLATBUSH WATER PLANT. Corporation Counsel Tells Commissioner Dalton He May Go Ahead.

The opinion on the city's right to acquire the plant of the Flatbush Water Company, which Commissioner Dalton asked of Corporation Counsel Whalen on Nov. 1, last, was sent to Mr Dalton yesterday. Mr. Whalen says that under the law there can be no doubt as to the right of the city to acquire by condemnation any real estate or interest therein, and wholly to exestate or interest therein, and wholly to ex-tinguish the water rights of any person or cor-poration within the city, for the purpose of ex-tending the public water works. Commissioner Dalton has refused to go ahead with the purchase of the Flatbush company's plant until Mr. Whalen paused on the legal as-pect of the matter, much to the disgust of the residents of Flatbush, who have complained for months of a lack of water.

MISS GIBNEY GRABS A THIEF. She Caught Him Robbing Her Bureau and He Didn't Get Away.

While Miss Jessie Gibney, 20 years old, of 455 Grove street, Jersey City, was dusting her parlor yesterday morning she heard a noise in an adjoining room. Pushing the door open. she saw a man rummaging the bureau drawers Miss Gibney grabbed the thief and screamed Miss Gibney grabbed the thief and screamed for help. The thief caught her by the throat and forced her to release her hold on him. He then ran out into the hall and went down the stairs in three jumps. Miss Gibney pursued him and her calls were heard by Richard Connell of 287 Ninth street and Charles Hare of 210½ Third street. They caught the fugitive just as he dashed out of the front door. The prisoner was turned over to Policeman Kelly, who took him to the Seventh street station. He described himself as Charles Patrick, 25 years old, of 575 Grove street, but he is not known at that address. Chief Murphy says that Patrick is a professional sneak thief, well known in the lower part of the city. He had taken some jewelry and clothing out of the bureau.

TO ENFORCE RULES OF THE ROAD. Police Ordered to Deal Sternly With Offending Drivers and Motormen.

Chief Devery issued orders to the force yesterday to enforce the rule of the road and especially to make all vehicles keep to the right. Any driver or mo orman who does not stop promptly when the policeman raises his hand promptly when the policeman raises his hand as a signal to him to pull up is to be arrested at once. The Chief says that he wants them to mind promptly, or to jail they go. His order was read at roll call last night, at midnight, and will be again this evening, so that all may hear. The chief offenders against the rules of the road are cabinen, who drive where they please; business wagors, which come to anchor with the port gangway instead of the starboard gangway next the curb; and wheeled craft of all sorts that cut short corners to the left in such a way as to endanger law-abiding vehicles in the street into which they turn.
